

New Considerations for Multi Layer Ceramic Capacitors in Military and Space Applications

Brian Ward

Vishay

Brian.Ward@vishay.com

There is a long history of using high reliability MLCCs in space applications. While These applications will always be there, new applications are emerging that do not require this pinnacle of reliability. These new designs can be quite effectively served with an alternate grade product. These products exist and their reliability is quite sufficient. However, the issue of tin whiskers still must be addressed for space applications.